You're not overwhelmed.

You're undocumented.

The work isn't the problem. Everything living rent-free in your head is.

A system you can't repeat isn't a system.
It's a personality.
And personalities don't scale — they burn out.

"I'll systemize it when I scale" is how you guarantee you never will.

Scale exposes the absence of a system. It doesn't create one.

Four lies that keep you undocumented:

- "I'll write it down when things slow down"
- "It's all in my head — I know it cold"
- "Every client is different"
- "I'll build the system when I scale"

If a sick day breaks the business, you don't own a business.

You're the bottleneck wearing a job title.

The system is what separates an operator from a freelancer.

Do this week:

1. Pick the one process that bleeds you the most.
2. Loom it the next time you actually do it.
3. Use the doc on the next client. Edit live.
