

progress. Usually it's just how you avoid the real work.

2. You don't have a reach problem. You have a recall problem. Big difference.

3. A forgettable message posted thirty times is still forgettable. Volume can't fix it.

4. The feed rewards the busy. The market rewards the clear. Stop feeding the feed.

5. Authority is built by repetition, not variety. Say one true thing fifty ways.

6. Track whether one idea landed – not how many posts you shipped this week.

7. Post half as often. Make each one impossible to forget. Less noise, more weight.

Stop posting to stay busy.
