FEATURES TELL. OUTCOMES SELL.

"I packed my offer with everything they could need. So why is it so hard to sell?"

Let me walk you through what's included...

12 modules, weekly calls, lifetime access.

I'll think about it and get back to you.

THE REAL PROBLEM

You describe the box. They want the destination.

Buyers don't pay for what's inside. They pay for where it takes them.

THE SHIFT

Nobody buys a course. They buy the version of themselves it creates.

Your offer doesn't need more features. It needs a clearer finish line.

THE OUTCOME STACK

4 translations that turn a feature list into a decision

🎯

Name the Destination

Not "coaching program." The specific result they leave with.

⏱️

Put a Clock On It

"In 8 weeks" beats "at your own pace" every single time.

🧭

Show the Before

Paint the current pain so the after has something to contrast with.

🔒

Bury the Features

Modules are proof of delivery. They come after the yes, not before.

THE MIRROR

Which offer page are you running?

SIGNAL	FEATURE-LED	OUTCOME-LED
Headline	"What's included"	"What you leave with"
Proof	Module count	Client results
Pitch	"You'll learn..."	"You'll have..."
Pricing	Hours of content	Transformation
Buyer feels	"Is it worth it?"	"I need that now"

FIX IT IN 3 STEPS

Rewrite your offer from feature-list to finish-line

1. Write the After
   One sentence describing the client's life the day your work ends.

2. Attach a Timeline
   Make the finish line measurable. A date beats a vibe every time.

3. Move Features to the Footnote
   Modules and bonuses live under the CTA, not above it.

> PRO TIP
> If your offer summary starts with "You get..." rewrite it to start with "You become..." That single swap changes the entire sale.

@SAMTRABULSI

STOP SELLING THE BOX.

Comment BRAND and I'll show you the one sentence rewrite that turns your offer from a feature list into a buy button.

COMMENT "BRAND"

@samtrabulsi · Brand Victory