Being the best in the room rarely gets you hired.
Being the most memorable does.

You spent 14 years mastering your craft.

Less experienced people sign the deals you should be closing.

Skill is not the gap. Frame is.

Skill earns trust. Memory earns the call.

Your expertise is invisible until your positioning becomes unforgettable.

What memorable experts actually do:

- Own one sharp category
- Repeat the same angle weekly
- Show proof in public
- Carry a one-line summary

Quiet expert: "I help people grow their business."

Memorable expert: "I help underpriced coaches turn 100 followers into $10K months."

One sounds generic. One sounds inevitable.

Pick one category.

Repeat one angle.

Show proof publicly.

Memorability is built by repetition, not credentials.
