

STOP EXPLAINING. START CLAIMING.

1. You're not losing the sale at the price.

You're losing it at "here's what I do."

2. Buyers don't hire activities.

They hire outcomes.

3. "I help coaches with mindset and sales."

You just described a vending machine.

4. If your bio is a services list, you're explaining when you should be claiming.

5. Write the outcome sentence:

I help [WHO] go from [BAD] to [BETTER].

6. If it could describe ten other people,

it isn't positioning. It's noise.

7. Stop explaining. Start claiming.

Until your one-liner makes the buyer feel seen,
nobody is booking the call.

– Sam Trabulsi