PERSONAL BRANDING

Your niche isn't who you help. It's who you're for.

Most experts are invisible — not because they lack skill, but because they tried to help everyone.

THE PROBLEM

Staying broad is keeping you broke.

> "I work with anyone who wants to grow their mindset…"

> "I help entrepreneurs, leaders, and anyone ready for change."

That's not a niche. That's a horoscope. And no one books a horoscope.

THE REFRAME

Niching down doesn't shrink your market. It sharpens your magnet.

❌ BEFORE

"I help professionals improve their performance and mindset."

↓

✓ AFTER

"I help Arab women therapists in the US get English-speaking private-pay clients."

THE FRAMEWORK

The 4-Part Niche Filter (Brand Victory Method)

Who — Exact person, not a category

Name the role, stage, or identity. "Coach" is not specific. "New coach earning under $3K/mo" is.

Pain — The one they're embarrassed by

Not "I want to grow." The real thing: "I'm great at my craft but can't price myself."

Result — Measurable, not motivational

Not "transformation." Say: "first $10K month" or "3 premium clients in 90 days."

Why you — Your unfair advantage

The lived experience, market access, or method no one else has. Own it explicitly.

SPOT YOURSELF

Which one sounds like your bio right now?

CLAIM	GENERIC	MAGNETIC
Target client	"Anyone"	Named person
Pain stated	Vague	Embarrassing
Result promised	Inspirational	Measurable
Your edge	Implied	Explicit
Inbound leads	Rare	Consistent

3 STEPS

How to write your niche sentence today

1. Finish this sentence out loud
   "The person I do my best work with is ___. Their biggest problem is ___. After working with me, they get ___."

2. Run it through the Brand Victory Filter
   Who + Pain + Result + Why You. If any piece is missing, it's not a niche — it's a guess.

3. Put it in line 1 of your bio
   Not in a highlight. Not buried. Line one. That's where the decision gets made.

⚡ PRO TIP

The risky-feeling niche is almost always the right one. Discomfort = specificity. Specificity = money.

FREE RESOURCE

Want your niche sentence done for you?

Comment below and I'll send you the Brand Victory Filter — the exact tool I use with clients to nail their niche in one session.

BRAND

→ Brand Victory Filter (PDF)

@SAMTRABULSI