Posting daily won't sell a vague offer.

You don't have a content problem.

You have an offer problem.

If someone asks "what do you sell?"
and your answer takes longer than ten seconds —
your audience can't answer it either.

Volume can't fix a fuzzy offer.

Frequency can't replace specifics.

You're just amplifying the confusion.

Four signs your offer is too vague to sell:

- You can't price it in one line
- Comments don't turn into DMs
- "Tell me more" is your most common reply
- Saves are high, sales are zero

2 posts a week with a clear offer
outsell 7 posts a week with a fuzzy one.
Clarity is the lever. Cadence is the cost.

This week:

1. Write the one-line offer (who, what, price).
2. Cut posting in half.
3. Pin the offer post. No mystery.
