THE CHEAP CLIENT TRAP

"Every lead wants a discount before they even ask what's inside. Am I the problem?"

Maybe I should offer a payment plan.

Lowered my price last month. Got more tire-kickers.

Why do only broke people find me?

THE REAL PROBLEM

You're not a victim of cheap clients. Your offer signals cheap.

The price is not the issue. The frame around it is.

🆘

BEFORE

Selling help

→

🎯

AFTER

Selling a decision

THE SHIFT

Cheap clients buy help. Premium clients buy certainty.

Your offer should signal which one you are — before anyone asks the price.

THE CHEAP SIGNAL STACK

4 signals your offer sends that attract the wrong buyer

🎯

Vague Promises

"Help you grow" attracts anyone desperate for hope.

💸

Apologetic Pricing

Explaining your price teaches people to negotiate it.

📋

Feature Stuffing

More bullets mean less perceived value per item.

⏳

No Outcome Deadline

Without a result-by date, your offer feels endless.

THE MIRROR

Which column does your offer sound like?

SIGNAL	CHEAP MAGNET	PREMIUM ANCHOR
Offer name	Generic label	The exact result
Pricing	Justified	Stated once
Deliverables	12+ items	3 outcomes
Timeline	Open-ended	Clear deadline
Close line	"Let me know"	"Next step is"

3 STEPS TO GET THERE

Stop attracting the wrong clients on autopilot

1. Rename the Offer
   Swap the generic label for the specific result in the title itself.

2. Cut Half the Deliverables
   Remove anything that does not directly produce the outcome promised.

3. Raise Price. Stop Explaining.
   Confidence in the number is what creates trust in the value.

> PRO TIP
> If you cannot say the price in one sentence without softening it, cheap clients know they can negotiate you down.

@SAMTRABULSI

STOP THE CHEAP LOOP.

Comment BRAND and I'll show you exactly what's making your offer attract the wrong buyer, apologize for the price, and get haggled every time.

COMMENT "BRAND"

@samtrabulsi · Brand Victory