You don't need another certificate.

You need a stance.

One the market can repeat about you in a sentence.

Credentials prove you studied.
Authority proves you decided.
Clients hire the second one. Always.

"I'll launch when I'm certified" is a smarter way to keep hiding.
You'll never feel ready inside a classroom.
Ready is built in public, after the launch, not before.

How smart experts stay invisible:

- Confusing studying with positioning
- Waiting to feel "ready enough"
- Listing credentials instead of opinions
- Hiding inside "I'm still learning"

Credentialed: "Certified in 7 modalities."

Chosen: "I fix this one problem."

One impresses your peers. The other gets booked.

This week:

1. Pick one strong opinion you'll defend.
2. Rewrite your bio as a result, not a resume.
3. Post the stance three times, three angles.

That sentence is the only credential that pays.
