THE CLIENT TRUTH

What most clients get wrong about hiring an expert.

7 assumptions that keep them stuck — and you underpaid.

@samtrabulsi

They come in with the wrong problem.

PROSPECT

"I just need more content. That'll fix my reach."

PROSPECT

"Can you make my bio sound better? That's all I need."

THE ACTUAL ISSUE

Their positioning is broken. More content just broadcasts confusion at scale.

They're solving symptoms, not the system.

WHAT THEY THINK

Fix the bio. Post more. Get a better headshot. Run ads.

WHAT'S ACTUALLY BROKEN

No clear offer. No niche signal. No trust architecture.

OLD BELIEF

"I need better tactics and more visibility."

→

THE TRUTH

"My brand has no spine. I've been building on sand."

The 4 wrong moves most clients make first.

🎯

Hiring for tactics, not strategy

A designer can't fix a positioning problem. Neither can a VA.

📣

Amplifying before clarifying

More reach on a blurry message = more confused followers.

💲

Underpricing to "attract" clients

Low price doesn't build trust. It signals low value.

⏳

Waiting until they're "ready"

The brand you build while waiting is the brand that holds you back.

Clients who scale vs. clients who stall.

BELIEF	STALLING	SCALING
On positioning	❌	✅
On pricing	❌	✅
On content role	❌	✅
On who they help	❌	✅
On timeline	❌	✅

One set of beliefs costs you $100K/year.

How to correct a client's frame in 3 moves.

1. Name the real problem out loud
   Don't fix what they asked for. Diagnose what's actually broken first.

2. Show them the cost of the wrong fix
   More content on a broken brand = 6 more months of stalling.

3. Offer the Brand Victory path instead
   Position → Price → Publish. In that order. Always.

⚡ PRO TIP

The client who resists the diagnosis is the one who needs it most.
