YOUR OFFER SOUNDS GENERIC

"I spent months building this offer. Why does it feel invisible the moment I explain it?"

Maybe I should add another bonus.

Three calls this week. Everyone went quiet.

It sounds just like everyone else's offer.

THE REAL PROBLEM

You are stacking features instead of owning a result

More bonuses do not fix a blurry outcome.

THE SHIFT

Stop listing what is inside. Own what comes out.

When your offer promises a specific, named transformation, price becomes a detail, not the decision.

THE DISTINCT OFFER STACK

4 things that make your offer impossible to confuse with anyone else

Name the Outcome

Give your result a label clients can repeat back to their partner.

Choose One Buyer

Speak to one person with one problem. Broad offers sound generic.

Show the Timeline

Vague "eventually" kills urgency. Promise a specific window.

Cut the Filler

Every extra bonus dilutes the hero result. Keep one center of gravity.

THE MIRROR

Which column sounds like your offer right now?

SIGNAL	GENERIC	DISTINCT
Promise	"Transform your life"	One named result
Buyer	Anyone who wants it	One specific person
Structure	10 modules, 6 bonuses	One clear path
Pricing	Defended by features	Anchored to outcome
Reaction	"Let me think"	"How do I start?"

3 STEPS TO DISTINCT

The fastest way to make your offer sound like only yours

1. Pick the One Result
   Choose the single outcome your best clients repeat back to you.

2. Name It Like a Product
   Give the outcome a short, memorable label clients can tell a friend.

3. Delete Half the Offer
   Strip every bonus that does not serve the named result.

> PRO TIP
> If a prospect cannot describe your offer in one sentence after your pitch, your offer is not distinct yet. Keep cutting.

@SAMTRABULSI

MAKE YOUR OFFER UNMISTAKABLE

Comment BRAND and I will show you the one line in your offer that is making it sound just like everyone else.

COMMENT "BRAND"

@samtrabulsi · Brand Victory