YOUR OFFER HAS TOO MUCH IN IT

SWIPE ›

THE PATTERN

"If I add more to the package, maybe they'll finally say yes..."

Wait, so what exactly do I get in this? There's a lot here.

Let me send the full breakdown document again.

I need to think about it. I'll circle back next week.

Every bonus you added diluted the promise

A confused buyer never buys. They go quiet instead.

THE REFRAME

BEFORE

📦 12 modules, 4 bonuses, 2 templates, Slack access

BUYER BRAIN FREEZES

↓

AFTER

🎯 One outcome. One path. One unmistakable promise.

BUYER SAYS YES FAST

More inside your offer does not equal more value.

It signals uncertainty. Buyers pay premium for clarity, not volume.

WHAT CHANGES

4 shifts when you strip the offer to its core

Sales calls get shorter

Clear promise means fewer questions and faster decisions on the spot.

Price objections shrink

When the outcome is obvious, the number stops being the focus.

Your ICP self-selects

A sharp promise attracts the right buyer and repels the wrong one.

Delivery gets easier

One promise equals one path. Less scope creep, better results.

THE DIFFERENCE

Stacked vs. Stripped

SIGNAL	STACKED	STRIPPED
Buyer reaction	Confused	Certain
Close time	Weeks	Days
Price framing	Expensive	Obvious
Scope creep	Constant	Contained
Referrals	Vague	Specific

THE MOVE

3 steps to strip your offer clean

1. Name the one outcome
   If a stranger read it once, could they repeat it back to you accurately?

2. Delete anything that is not the shortest path
   Bonuses are not assets. They are friction. Cut what does not drive the result.

3. Price the outcome, not the contents
   A list of deliverables invites comparison. A promise invites trust.

> PRO TIP
> If you cannot explain your offer in one breath, your buyer cannot sell it to themselves.

@SAMTRABULSI

Comment "BRAND" below

I'll show you exactly what is bloating your offer, confusing your buyer, and blocking your close.

COMMENT BRAND

@samtrabulsi · Brand Victory