Another certification won't win you the client.

The market doesn't hire the most qualified. It hires the most recognizable.

You keep adding credentials. Calls stay flat.

Buyers don't read your resume. They read your promise.

Credentials prove capability.

Clarity provokes a decision.

Degrees impress peers. Positioning moves buyers.

Three layers build authority faster than another course:

- A named audience — one role, one stage
- A specific pain — not 'I help everyone'
- A framed lens — your take on the problem

Credentialed account vs positioned account:

One collects letters. One claims a lane.

One teaches the craft. One names the pain.

One waits to feel ready. One builds the door.

The most credentialed expert isn't chosen.

The clearest one is.
