

1. Volume is not visibility.

Frequency without a point is just noise in someone's feed.

2. The market is not waiting for your 47th post. It is waiting for the one that names its pain.

3. If every post sounds like every post, your account becomes background – not a brand.

4. Posting daily without positioning is doing reps without a target. You get tired. Nothing lands.

5. One sharp post will outsell thirty polite ones. Because sharp gets repeated.

6. The right buyer doesn't scroll past five tips. They stop on one sentence that names them.

7. Stop measuring posts. Start measuring what the buyer can repeat after reading you once.

Burnout is not the price of growth.
