

person in the room. They hire
the one they can describe.

2. If they can't repeat what you do,
they can't refer you. Vague experts die in silence.

3. Your bio reads like a resume.
Buyers don't want history.
They want a verdict.

4. Generic experts compete on price.
Specific experts set it.
Specificity is the premium.

5. Smart is the baseline. Specific is the differentiator. The market pays for the second one.

6. You don't have a credibility gap.
You have a sentence gap. One line decides if they swipe.

7. Stop describing your field.
Start naming the person you save and the result you deliver.

Expertise doesn't speak for itself.
