

YOUR TESTIMONIALS ARE NOT CLOSING CLIENTS

"Working with Sarah was amazing! 10/10, would recommend!"

Looks great — but does she work with people like me?

No idea. The quote is too vague.

I'll keep looking. Need someone with proof I can see.

THE TRAP

Generic praise does not move a skeptical buyer.

"Amazing!" is decoration. Buyers need to see themselves in the win.

THE SHIFT

Buyers don't believe praise. They believe stories with stakes.

Show the before, the moment, and the after. That is the only proof that converts.

4 reasons your testimonials are not converting

No Mirror

"She was amazing!" tells your buyer nothing about themselves. Without a recognizable pain, they can't picture themselves in the result.

No Measure

"It changed my life" is a vibe, not a metric. Buyers want to see a number — revenue, time saved, clients booked. Vague proof reads as fake.

No Arc

A real testimonial is a three-act story: stuck, decision, transformed. A floating quote with no journey skips the part that builds belief.

No Persona

A nameless quote feels stock. Specific name, role, and ICP marker (industry, stage, struggle) is what makes the buyer say "that's me."

THE MIRROR

Generic testimonial vs structured proof.
Same client. Different impact.

| ELEMENT        | GENERIC       | STRUCTURED       |
|----------------|---------------|------------------|
| Opens with     | Praise        | A pain           |
| ICP marker     | Missing       | Named            |
| Decision shown | Skipped       | Front and center |
| Outcome        | Vague vibe    | Specific number  |
| Buyer reaction | "That's nice" | "That's me"      |

THE MOVE

Rewrite your testimonials in 3 sharp steps

1

Open With The Pain

Lead with the exact problem the client had before you. "I was posting daily but no one booked calls." Now your buyer recognizes themselves in line one.

2

Show The Decision

Capture the moment they decided to act. What broke? What did they realize? The decision is where belief is built — not the praise.

3

Close With A Number

End with a measurable outcome. "Three premium clients in six weeks." Specific numbers do what generic gratitude never can — they convert.

PRO TIP

If a client only sends "thank you so much," ask three follow-up questions: where you started, what shifted, what changed. That is the testimonial.
