Your effort is not the problem.

Your effort is not compounding.

That is a system problem.

Every post, call, and offer should feed the next one.

If they do not, you are not building a business.

You are just staying busy.

Compounding is built on 3 things:

- A consistent input
- A clear output
- A feedback loop that sharpens both

If your content vanishes after 48 hours, it is not an asset.

It is a performance.

Assets compound. Performances exhaust you.

Most founders are running 5 disconnected businesses at once.

One for content. One for sales. One for delivery.

Nothing compounds because nothing connects.

The fastest way to compound is to repeat, not reinvent.

One message. One buyer. One offer.

Ninety days. No pivots.

You do not need more effort.

You need a system that lets every effort count twice.
