

YOU'RE NOT INVISIBLE. INDISTINGUISHABLE.

"My work speaks for itself..."

"...so why is no one calling?"

"They saw me. They scrolled past."

"I sound like every other coach."

THE TRAP

Seen. Not chosen.

Skill is the floor. Not the differentiator.

INVISIBLE

No one sees you

INDISTINGUISHABLE

They see you,
can't place you

THE REFRAME

Different problem. Different fix.

Invisible means you need more reach. Indistinguishable means you need a sharper position.

WHY YOU BLEND IN

Four patterns that erase a sharp position

Your bio says "I help" without saying who

"I help people grow" tells the market nothing it can refer.

You list services, not a problem you fix

Services are commodities. Problems create urgency.

Your content could be signed by anyone

If your name doesn't change the meaning, it's not your voice.

You compete on credentials, not on stance

Diplomas don't differentiate. Opinions do.

THE COMPARISON

Generic expert vs. positioned expert

SIGNAL	GENERIC	POSITIONED
Bio	"I help people grow"	Names a who + a problem
Offer	Coaching, by the hour	An outcome, by the project
Content	Tips anyone could write	A clear, repeated stance
Inbound	"What do you do again?"	"You're the one who..."
Pricing	Compared to peers	Compared to the problem

DO THIS WEEK

Sharpen your position in three lines

- 1 Name the exact person you serve
"Founders" is too broad. "Solo coaches under $10k/month" is a market.
- 2 Name the specific problem you fix
Not "growth." A problem they'd type into a search bar at midnight.
- 3 Pick a stance no peer dares to repeat
If everyone agrees with you, you don't have a position. You have a platitude.

PRO TIP

If a stranger can't repeat your positioning back after one scroll, the market never had a reason to remember you in the first place.

@SAMTRABULSI

Stop being a beautiful blur.

Position sharper. Get chosen, not just seen.
