LIKES ARE NOT LEADS.

Why engagement isn't pipeline

@samtrabulsi

"My last post got 800 likes and 60 comments. Zero clients."

"How many people booked a call?"

"None. But the engagement was crazy."

"That's the gap. Engagement is not intent."

THE TRAP

Reach without intent is a parade.

Likes feel like progress. They are not progress. Progress is a stranger raising a hand and saying "I want to buy."

ENGAGEMENT

"Cool.
I'll tap the heart and scroll."

INTENT

"How much and when can we start?"

THE REFRAME

A like costs zero. A DM costs identity.

Engagement is what people do when nothing is on the line. Intent is what they do when something is. Stop optimizing for the first. Design for the second.

FOUR FAKE-INTENT SIGNALS THAT FOOL YOU

Every one of these feels like buying. None of them is.

A viral post with no DMs

A million eyes and zero conversations. Reach without ask. The post entertained. It didn't sell.

"Love this!" in the comments

Admiration is not transaction. The compliment is for the post, not for the offer underneath it.

Saves that never come back

A save is a promise to future-them. Most future-thems never show up. Saves don't pay invoices.

Follows from peers, not buyers

Other experts liking your work is a status signal. It is not a pipeline signal. Peer applause doesn't pay rent.

THE COMPARISON

Engagement signals vs. intent signals

SIGNAL	ENGAGEMENT	INTENT
Action	Like, save, share	DM, book, buy
Cost to user	Zero	Time, money, identity
What it proves	"I noticed you"	"I trust you"
Optimized by	Hooks, looks, hot takes	Offer, proof, clarity
Revenue link	Indirect, often zero	Direct, measurable

DO THIS WEEK

Trade applause for intent. Three moves.

- 1 Replace "Thoughts?" with a real ask
"Reply YES if you want a 1:1 walkthrough." "DM ME the word START and I'll send the offer." Tell people exactly what to do next.
- 2 Count decisions, not impressions
For every post, write down: how many DMs, how many calls booked, how many paid. Likes don't enter the spreadsheet.
- 3 Stop chasing the post that goes viral
Chase the post that gets ten DMs from the right kind of buyer. A small, hot audience beats a large, lukewarm one every time.

PRO TIP

At the end of the month, look at your bank statement, not your follower count. If the line went up, your content worked. If it didn't, you have an intent problem dressed as a content problem.

@SAMTRABULSI

Stop counting eyes. Start counting decisions.

Engagement is rent. Intent is revenue.
