Smart doesn't sell.

Specific does.

You have the certifications. The case studies. The years.
And buyers still can't repeat what you do in one sentence.

You don't have a credibility gap. You have a sentence gap.

The market hires what it can describe — not what's impressive.

Four signs smart is hiding weak positioning:

- Your bio lists what you studied, not who you save
- Friends can't explain what you actually do
- You keep dropping price to win deals
- You get compliments, not calls

Generic experts compete on price.

Specific experts set it.

Specificity is the premium.

Do this week:

1. Rewrite your bio: who you save + what you deliver.
2. Run the friend test — can they repeat what you do?
3. Name one buyer you will not serve.
